

A former secretary spoke yesterday of what it felt like taking a Beatle at a time. She is Mrs. Angela McCartney, aged 25, who secretly married Paul McCartney's father, Mr. Jim McCartney, on Tuesday.

She first met Paul, aged 22, and his brother, Mike, aged 26—now making his debut in London with The Scaffold, a Liverpool satirical group—last weekend. "I expected to be a bit overawed but having met them, I don't feel like that at all. I know we are going to sell as a family," she said.

Mrs. McCartney, whose first husband Eddie, died in a car crash three years ago, added that her daughter, Ruth, aged four, was delighted to have brothers. Ruth babbled around in the background, humming a Beatle tune.

Joining the Beatle family

Mrs. McCartney was speaking in the lounge of the detached £15,000 house in Gayton, Wirral, which the McCartneys moved into a few months ago. "We are just getting the house into shape," said Mr. McCartney.

The couple were married in a church in North Wales and so quiet was the wedding that no members of either family were present, and two strangers acted as witnesses. Mr. McCartney, aged 42, a widower, is seen here with his wife and stepdaughter.

The new Mrs. McCartney was born in Grosvenor Road, Hoylake, but has lived in Liverpool most of her life. She originally met Beatle Paul's father about ten years ago, through her long friendship with his niece, Mrs. Elizabeth Robbins, of Stoneycroft.

"But I hadn't seen him until Elizabeth brought me over to Gayton, earlier this year," she said.

"I gave up my job last Friday and so great was the secrecy that I didn't even tell my boss why I was leaving," said Mrs. McCartney, who was personal secretary to Mr. David Gakes, assistant managing director of Pure Chemicals, Ltd., Kirkby Trading Estate.

The couple returned to Gayton immediately after the wedding and plan a honeymoon later. Mrs. McCartney said she thought her new home was beautiful. "It's nice and peaceful—we hope the fans will let it remain that way," she said.